

WHAT IS CLAIMED IS:

1. A separating fence comprising:

two posts each having a rod with a top sucking member connected to a top of the rod and a bottom sucking member connected 5 to a lower end of the rod;

two sleeves mounted to each of the rods and each sleeve including two extensions extending radially outward therefrom, a passage defined through each of the extensions, two side walls extending from each of the extensions and a space between the two 10 side walls being in communication with the passage; two transverse tubes extending through the passages of the extensions, and a locking member pivotably connected between the two side walls of each of the extensions, each locking member having a cam 15 head and a lever connected to the cam head, the cam head being pivoted to press the transverse tube to position the transverse tubes.

2. The fence as claimed in claim 1, wherein a U-shaped part having two legs which are inserted in open ends of the transverse tubes, each transverse tube having a positioning member mounted 20 thereto and a bolt extending through a wall of the positioning member so as to press the leg of the U-shaped part in the open end of the transverse tube.